References Category:Windows softwareQ: Add a css class to input[type='radio']:checked I'm trying to add a css class to my input radio when checked (checked is a class). I already tried this but it doesn't work. I tried also something more fancy like this, but it didn't work either. `$(".input_radio").on('change', function() { $(".input_radio").addClass("checked"); });` I have a form, and I want to add a class to the input when its checked (i.e, if the user choose a question from a list, it should be added this class). Where am I wrong? A: CSS Class names must start with a letter (non-space character) A through Z, and should have lowercase letters, and no special characters // selected === class name === radio element `$(".input_radio").on('change', function() { // Use class name itself $(this).addClass('.selected'); });` // Or use index-based class name selector. `$(".input_`
