As a part of the stunt, Domino's is offering a free large pizza to the first person who walks into a participating store with a President Trump sticker on their window. "We're offering the pizza as a chance to have a good night and let bygones be bygones -- and for us to have a little fun on the election anniversary of November 8, 2016," said Adam Mullens, the chief marketing officer of Domino's Pizza, Inc. "We're very proud of the number of people who have already shown their support for Trump in the post-election period," he told NBC News. "We are encouraging folks to express their support for a free pizzas and show that we are here for our customers." The stunt is taking place at 23 stores in the Los Angeles, San Diego, and Orange County area with more than two dozen others scheduled to take part in the following weeks. One Los Angeles store is located at 216 N. Hoover Street in the Echo Park neighborhood. The firm is selling stickers for $10 each that can be applied to the store's front window at the participating locations. The pizza will be offered to the first person who shows the sticker at the store. In addition f678ea9f9e
